Extrusion, Lamination and Polyethylene (PE) Coating

High Performance in Packaging: Extrusion Lamination and PE Coating

In the modern packaging industry, where sustainability and high protection are paramount, Extrusion Lamination and Polyethylene (PE) Coating technology is at the heart of production. Combining different materials such as paper, cardboard or aluminum foil into a single high-performance structure, these systems are the lifeblood of the flexible packaging world.

Technology and Working Principles

Extrusion lamination works on the principle of melting low-density polyethylene (LDPE) at high temperatures and applying it as a curtain (film) between two layers of material. This solvent-free, environmentally friendly method is the first choice in premium packaging production due to its high production speeds and flawless surface quality.

Powerful Features It Brings to the Product

The natural properties of paper combined with the barrier strength of polyethylene provide the following advantages to the product:

- ◆ Liquid and Moisture Barrier: It prevents water and moisture from leaking in and preserves the packaging shape.
- ◆ Heat Seal: It ensures that packaging mouths are safely sealed with heat on packaging lines.
- ◆ Oil Resistance: It prevents oil leakage from fast-food and ready-to-eat food packaging.

Wide Range of Applications

The laminated coils produced by these machines are found in every aspect of life:

Food & Fast Food: Cardboard cups, kraft bowls, instant soup, sugar sticks and coffee packages.

Hygiene & Medical: Wet wipe packaging and sterilization packaging.

This advanced technology, which combines engineering with aesthetics, continues to shape the future of the sustainable packaging industry with minimum waste and high automation power.
